What is the 1890 Capacity Building Grant Program?

The CBG program was initiated in FY 1990 to build the institutional capacities of the 1890 historically black land-grant Institutions and Tuskegee University through cooperative initiatives with Federal and non-Federal entities. The program supports the design and implementation of innovative teaching and research projects in targeted need areas of the food and agricultural sciences. The maximum amount for a teaching grant is $200,000, while a research grant is $300,000.

The program seeks to: (1) attract more students from under represented groups into the food and agricultural sciences, (2) expand the linkages among the 1890 Institutions and with other colleges and universities, and (3) strengthen the teaching and research capacity of the 1890 Institutions to more firmly establish them as full partners in the food and agricultural science and education system.
